GLASGOW SCHOOLS

THE HISTORY OF GLASGOW SCHOOLS

The history of education in and around Glasgow shows the citizen's enthusiasm and interest to give their families all possible advantages for education.

William Henry Lewis established a coeducational academy a short time before 1848-1850. It consisted of two frame buildings in the yard of Stephen H. Lewis.

The Glasgow Seminary, the most important school, was erected in 1848-1850. The school opened in the fall of 1856, under the direction of Reverend A. B. Frazier, the first principal. Courses in liberal art education were taught, however, in a few years it proved inadequate for educational purposes.

In 1856, an enrollment of one hundred forty students marked the opening of Lewis College. In a few years lack of space necessitated the purchase of the Female Seminary, and later, the residence of Glen Eden. The school continued until 1891. The Lewis Library was constructed in 1866, being the second library in the state.

The Glasgow Public School was first organized as a two-room school in 1866. In ten years, the enrollment had grown, along with the addition of four new rooms, and an increase in the size of the faculty. In 1916 it was a first class high school. A new building was dedicated in 1928; the old building continued to be used by the high school.

LAYING THE CORNERSTONE FOR A NEW ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

The opening of Pritchett College was made possible by James A. Swinney, who donated $20,000 for erection of the college. The inscription above the entrance was "Teach, Learn or Leave." Space was limited, so seven acres of ground were obtained for $3,000, and new building constructed for $20,000. The new three-story building provided recitation rooms, lecture rooms, laboratories and a museum, and accommodated two hundred pupils. It was later consolidated with the Glasgow Public School which proved advantageous to both schools.

Miss Bernice Morrison, donated $50,000 for the Morrison Observatory, erected in 1875 at Pritchett College. After 1907 it ceased operation and in 1936 the instruments were moved to an observatory at Central Methodist College, Fayette, Missouri.

The erection of the Catholic Parochial School, made possible through the personal interest of the priest and people, began about 1866, shortly after the Civil War, under the direction of Reverend Henry Meurs. In 1915 the present, modern building was constructed at the cost of $30,000.

The Evans School moved into the Glasgow Grade School in 1964-65. Special education classes from the Glasgow Grade School now meet in the Evans Building.

More changes are scheduled for the Grade School pupils in Glasgow, following the completion in the fall of 1966, of a new, modern school building. Estimated cost of the building is $302,000.

“DEDICATION”

We the students of Glasgow High School, wish to express our deep appreciation and gratitude to Miss Fosine Sigmund for her sincerity, devotion, promptness, zest for living, and her deep desire to help each and every student to learn.

She has served faithfully as a class sponsor and is an active participant in school activities.

In her unfaltering ways, she has given us the key which unlocks the door to a better understanding of English.

For these outstanding qualities of success, we are pleased to dedicate the 1966 Muddy-Mo to you . . . Miss Rosine Sigmund.

ADMINISTRATION

THE MESSAGE OF SUPERINTENDENT

Jesse E. Walters Superintendent of Schs.

The time has come to begin the closing activities of another school year and looking back; it has been a full year for all of us. We welcomed new faces at the beginning of the year and as we become acquainted, the year began to unfold. To each of you, students, teachers, and other employees, I must say you have been a fine team, working for a common goal; education for the future.

To the fine class of nineteen hundred and sixty-six, the seniors; you have had so little time to enjoy your exalted status as seniors before the year fades and it is time to bid farewell. To those of us who remain for another, and other years, we wish you success for we know you leave behind many happy memories that will become more dear to you in the years ahead.

To the juniors who become next year's seniors I extend a good wish and know that you will be an asset to our school as we go into another year next fall.

To the underclassmen, the years ahead should hold much that will help shape your lives and round out your education, your personality and your future.

I have enjoyed with you this past year, the basketball games, baseball games, parties, dances, plays and most of all your company and your presence in the halls and classrooms of dear old Glasgow High School.

These closing days will bring still more enjoyable times and pleasant situations for us all to remember.

OUTWARD BOUND

When a ship in harbor is ready to sail, outward bound, she hoists the flag. Every spring all across the United States, there are imaginary flags fluttering over schools to signal the launching of students upon the sea of life.

They have been equipped with formal education, which is comparable to a set of charts. In itself, knowledge is like a chart--of no value except as it is used to steer your ship with understanding and judgment.

Steering is necessary because you can't sail everywhere at once. Life is a voyage during which one touches at many ports. A happy outcome is due largely to the skill with which you pilot your craft from one harbor to another.
